

LBS TESTS OF EXPLOSIVE SAFETY MEASURES OF SHELTERS

Michael H. Klaus, A. Burbach
Wehrtechnische Dienststelle für Sprengmittel und Sondertechnik
Oberjettenberg 83458 Schneizlreuth Germany

How useful is a facility that has been built for the simulation of a nuclear blast nowadays? The UK and France answered this question quite consequent: They closed their according facilities in Foulness and Gramat.

No doubt, the nuclear threat is decreasing -although by far not vanished- but other threats are emerging and blast problems in general still exist and will exist.

This paper shows how existing blast simulators can be used for the new threats, which are mainly generated by conventional weapon effects.